Dear Ms. Vasulka:

We now have information on the monitors and additional player unit for the "Invitational" installation. I am enclosing copies of the information regarding statistics. A local audio-visual store will loan the monitors and our KBIM Television Station is loaning the second player.

As you will note both players are JVC, the Museum's being the model #CP-5000U and the CP-5500U coming from the TV station. We hope the units will prove compatible for synchronizing the program. If not, let us know as soon as possible, so we can begin further investigation.

The store loaning the monitors has offered to build the stand for the display unit. Wendell has indicated a preference for the "1984 National Video Festival" configuration (copy enclosed). If that's still OK with you we'll get a copy over to the store, so they can begin construction. Let me know your thoughts about that as well.

Otherwise, everything proceeds smoothly towards the September 13th opening date. All catalog materials have been sent to our designer, so you should be hearing from Eleanor Caponigro in regards to the color prints for reproduction.

One final point -- if you have any black & white photographs of yourself available we would like to borrow them for future publicity for the "Invitational". Thank you.

Sincerely,

William D. Ebie
